Preface – Namibia Scientific Society

The Constitution of the Republic of Namibia came into existence in 1990 and has since then been the foundation of all our civic rights and duties, as well as legislation and government policies. In the spirit of its founding parents, the members of the elected Constituent Assembly of 1989/90, it is important to keep the Constitution alive in our planning and thinking, or to make it a living document, as it is often cited. In practice, this means that the Constitution needs to be accessible as well as comprehensible to all citizens, visitors, investors and foreigners who are living and working in Namibia in order to serve as a guideline for political, economic and civic decisions.

This edition of the Namibian Constitution is a contribution towards this objective. It is intended to serve as a reference guide, handbook and source of information. It contains not only the full text of the Constitution including its three Amendment Acts, but also comprehensive additional information both for practical use and for a better understanding of important and controversial parts of the Constitution.

For practical purposes, this publication also includes the musical score and lyrics of the Namibian National Anthem and the lyrics of the Anthem of the African Union, as well as information on Namibia's National Flag, other state flags, the National Coat of Arms and the National Seal.

For a better understanding, you will find a short overview of the history of the Constitution, and the texts of UN Resolution 435 and the 1982 Constitutional Principles, both of which had a decisive influence on the content of the Constitution of an independent Namibia. Furthermore, this book provides some explanatory notes on controversial parts of the Constitution, such as provisions on land expropriation, the death penalty, affirmative action, compulsory education and the terms of office of the President.

We can surely be proud of our Constitution. However, its practical application in all spheres of life presupposes thorough knowledge of its provisions and principles. It is the wish of the Namibia Scientific Society and the Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung that this edition will contribute to enhancing this knowledge, and that it will encourage the implementation of constitutional law for the benefit of our society and each individual citizen.

Preface – Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung

The Constitution sets out the fundamental legal order for the Republic of Namibia. It forms the foundation of our common values in society, and as an embodiment of our supreme rule of law it provides the guiding principles according to which the State may exercise its power.

Since its adoption in 1990, the Namibian Constitution has been amended only three times, by a two-thirds majority in Parliament. The objective of the amendments was to respond to social and political developments or to provide orientation with respect to new important political issues.

The guiding principles for the work of the Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung are liberty, justice and solidarity, and all of our efforts centre on the unique dignity of human beings and their basic rights and duties. We therefore see it as one of our main tasks to promote and consolidate the process of democratisation and to bring the Constitution nearer to its people, inter alia through regular socio-political training programmes. The Constitution forms the foundation of our peaceful coexistence. It lays down the basic structure of our political order, and at the same time determines the everyday life of each individual.

Through the publication of this latest version of the Namibian Constitution, the Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung would like to promote the knowledge and awareness of Namibian citizens of their basic democratic rights and duties. We hope that in this way a kind of ‘constitutional patriotism’ can develop that will empower us to master the challenges of our society in the spirit of solidarity and justice while respecting democratic rules. Democracy needs citizens who are committed and engaged, and it is essential that the concept of human dignity, freedom, equality and tolerance are translated into action. This, however, is only possible if the Constitution is clearly known and understood by everyone.

It is therefore our particular concern – 28 years after the date of independence – to make the Constitution available in different Namibian languages so that the entire population is reached. Along with this English version, translations in Oshiwambo and German are now available.

Namibia's Constitution – an extraordinary document

In November 1989, after 30 years of waging a war for liberation from colonial rule, Namibia elected a Constituent Assembly under the auspices of the United Nations. On 21 November, the Assembly's 72 members convened for the first time under the chairmanship of Dr Hage Geingob, who became Namibia's third President in 2015. Only 80 days later, on 9 February 1990, the Constitution was adopted. It came into force on Independence Day, 21 March 1990.

Namibia's independence was achieved during a time of political upheaval both in the Western world and in Southern Africa. In Europe, the fall of the Berlin Wall in November 1989 marked the end of the Cold War, and in South Africa, Nelson Mandela was released in February 1990, after 27 years of imprisonment, marking the end of Apartheid. Both of these events had a decisive impact on the independence process in Namibia.

The Namibian Constitution, which was written between those two watershed events, is an extraordinary document in many ways. It was the first time that an African colony became an independent state on the basis of a Constitution written as part and parcel of an international process rather than as a unilateral act by the former colony itself. Several proposals for Namibia's Constitution – including the Constitution drafted by the South West Africa People's Organisation (SWAPO) and the 1982 Constitutional Principles established by the Western Five Contact Group – were laid on the table and discussed, and the content of the final Constitution is a reflection of a give-and-take process and numerous compromises. It contains elements of international law, entrenches universal human rights, and makes reference to the troubled history of the country which had been a German colony for three decades (until 1915) and then a South African colony for 75 years (until 1990). The desire for reconciliation as well as unity, justice and liberty was therefore of fundamental importance.

The 72 elected members of the Constituent Assembly belonged to seven political parties, some of which had stood against each other as enemies during the war for liberation. And yet they wrote this Constitution in an atmosphere characterised by mutual respect, openness and political magnanimity. After only 80 days, the Constitution was adopted not only by a majority, but unanimously. Since then it has been the supreme law of the Namibian nation, and one to which all other laws as well as policies and structures of government have to conform.

Following is a summary of some of the special features of this extraordinary document.

Fundamental human rights and freedoms

Chapter 3 of the Constitution contains a Bill of Rights with a comprehensive catalogue of entrenched fundamental human rights and freedoms which may never be abolished or diminished, not even by a two-thirds majority in Parliament. They include freedom of speech, religion and assembly, and the freedom of the press – rights which for decades were denied to the people of Namibia under South Africa's system of Apartheid. The Constitution also prohibits discrimination or inhumane treatment of persons on the grounds of their "sex, race, colour, ethnic origin, religion, creed or social or economic status" (Article 10).

Death penalty

One of the fundamental rights enshrined in the Constitution is the right to life (Article 6). The related controversial issue of capital punishment (or the death penalty) was discussed extensively and contentiously in the Constituent Assembly. Many members pleaded for the retention of capital punishment, but in the end, the view of those who pleaded against it prevailed. They argued that the repressive apartheid regime had misused the death penalty as an instrument for eliminating political opponents, and in a new and free Namibia this abuse of power should be counteracted right from the start. Hence the application of the death penalty is constitutionally prohibited in Namibia – in spite of repeated public demands for its reintroduction in the wake of increasing incidences of murder, rape, deaths resulting from domestic violence, and other serious crimes.

Property rights and land reform

All Namibian citizens have a constitutional right to private property, including the right to own land. According to Article 16(1), "all persons shall have the right in any part of Namibia to acquire, own and dispose of all forms of immovable and movable property...". This implies that property rights during the pre-independence era are not negated, although the State may, according to Article 16(2), "expropriate property in the public interest subject to the payment of just compensation."

No Article in the Constitution demands or describes any form of land redistribution, thus the Constitution does not provide any right to reinstitute pre-colonial property rights or to claim ancestral land. This was a disappointment to many Namibians who expected some form of compensation for land expropriations during colonial times. Nonetheless, Article 16 is of special importance for the land reform process in Namibia, because it does provide the constitutional guidelines for land redistribution and land expropriation. However, in the spirit of national reconciliation instilled ever since independence, the Government has not extensively exercised its right to expropriate land, but has rather established different instruments for redistributing land.

Sexual orientation

While the South African Constitution explicitly prescribes that no person may be discriminated against on the basis of sexual orientation, the Namibian Constitution only stipulates that persons may not be discriminated against based on their sex. However, in 1999 a legal precedent was set when a lesbian couple took a state department to court because they felt that they had been disadvantaged on account of their sexual orientation. The court ruled in favour of their lawsuit.

Protection of the environment

The Namibian Constitution set an example worldwide when it included the protection of the environment as a primary principle of state policy. Part of this policy is to take express measures against the dumping of foreign nuclear waste. Article 95(1) says, among other things, that the State “shall adopt policies aimed at the ... utilization of living natural resources on a sustainable basis for the benefit of all Namibians, both present and future; in particular, the Government shall provide measures against the dumping or recycling of foreign nuclear and toxic waste on Namibian territory.”

Affirmative action

The Constitution implicitly prescribes that men and women shall be treated equally, and commits the Government to enact legislation to ensure equality of opportunity for women (Article 95(a)). It also commits the Government to a policy of “Affirmative Action” in favour of “persons within Namibia who have been socially, economically or educationally disadvantaged by past discriminatory laws or practices” (Article 23(2)). This includes a “balanced structuring of the public service, the defence force, the police force, and the correctional services” (ibid.).

Education for all and poverty alleviation

Article 20 refers to the right to free primary education for all, and stipulates that primary education is compulsory up to the age of 16 or until the completion of primary education – whichever occurs first. All persons also have the right to establish private schools, colleges or institutions of tertiary education at their own expense.

Article 95 obliges the State to actively promote the welfare of its people. For example, the State must ensure that senior citizens receive a regular pension that helps them to maintain “a decent standard of living” (95(f)), and that “the unemployed, the incapacitated, the indigent and the disadvantaged” are accorded social benefits (95(g)).

On account of the low population density in large parts of Namibia, the high HIV/AIDS rate, the high rate of poverty (particularly in the rural areas) and other factors, the Government has struggled to do justice to Articles 20 and 95 to the extent intended. In 2015 the newly elected President established a new ministry, the Ministry of Poverty Eradication and Social Welfare, to address the issue of poverty in a more focused way.

Secular state

After the end of Apartheid it was the wish of most members of the Constituent Assembly that Namibia would become a secular state without a state religion. The explicit separation of State and Church was important to them, as the NG Church of the Afrikaans (white) people had been a close political ally of the Apartheid Government. The NG Church not only had substantial influence on all state schools by virtue of the political orientation of the Government, but had also ideologically underpinned the politics of apartheid in its teachings. The requirement of secularisation led to, among other things, the abolition of religious education in Namibia's public schools, and of the customary prayer at the beginning of public events or meetings. However, such prayer was soon reintroduced on a voluntary basis, and the Council of Churches in Namibia (CCN) has long advocated for, and is working towards, the reintroduction of religious education in the schools.

The power of the President

In Chapter 5, the Constitution deems Namibia's President to be the "Head of State and Government" (Article 27), and prescribes that the President will be elected directly by the people every five years (Articles 28 and 29(1)(a)). The Constitution gives the President comprehensive executive powers, but in order to prohibit a President from staying in office for two or more decades as has happened in some other African States, the Constituent Assembly unanimously resolved to allow the President only two five-year terms of office. Later, an exception was made only for the first President of Namibia, Dr Sam Nujoma, on the technical grounds that, for his first term, he was elected by the Constituent Assembly and not directly by the people. The first amendment to the Constitution, made in 1998, allowed him, and only him, to be re-elected for a third term after two terms of office, and he was duly re-elected by a large majority of the people.

In accordance with the third amendment of the Constitution, in October 2014, Namibia now also has a Vice-President, appointed by the President. This appointment must take account of the diversity of the Namibian population, or, as the Constitution now states (in Article 32(3A)), "the President shall have due regard for the need to obtain a balanced reflection of the national character of the people of Namibia."

The Namibian Constitution Third Amendment Act (2014) also provides for several important extensions of the President's powers. For example, the Head of the Intelligence Service and all Regional Governors (the political heads of the country's 14 regions) are now directly appointed by the President, and all members of the Electoral Commission are appointed by the President with the approval of the National Assembly.

Executive and Legislative – a true division of power?

The separation of legislative and executive powers as prescribed by the Constitution has worked only to a limited extent in practice in Namibia. This is due to the constitutional requirement that the President, when appointing the Prime Minister and all Ministers and Deputy Ministers (and also the Vice-President since 2015), may select only from the members of the National Assembly. This requirement was based on entirely democratic considerations, the aim being to prevent the composition of a Cabinet which in practice could consist entirely of non-elected and possibly unqualified candidates who are in one way or another close to the President. In addition, the writers of the Constitution wanted appointed Ministers to be included in the National Assembly, where they could directly and at any time be held accountable by those Members of Parliament.

Although such a requirement is not uncommon among Parliaments worldwide, in Namibia, as in some other countries, it became an obstacle to the effective functioning of the Legislative vis-à-vis the Executive. The reason for this in Namibia is that the National Assembly with its 72 voting members (up to 2015) was numerically very small compared to the Namibian Cabinet with its more than 40 Ministers and Deputy-Ministers, with far more than half of the Members of the National Assembly simultaneously being members of the Executive, which enabled the Executive to impose a decision on the Legislative by a majority vote. For this reason, the Namibian Constitution Third Amendment Act of 2014 increased the number of voting members of the National Assembly from 72 to 96.

Amendments to the Constitution

Chapter 19 of the Constitution makes provision for amending this supreme law, but stipulates that no repeal or amendment of the fundamental rights and freedoms contained and defined in Chapter 3 will be permitted if it diminishes or detracts from any of those fundamental rights and freedoms (Article 131).

The Constitution can be amended only if at least two-thirds of all Members of the National Assembly approve, and if two-thirds of all members of the National Council approve (the National Council being Namibia's second House of Parliament), or if a two-thirds majority of all the votes cast in a national referendum are in agreement with the proposed change.

During the first 28 years of independence, there were only three amendments to the Constitution. The first one, in 1998, applied only to the extended term of office of the first President of Namibia. The Second Amendment, in 2010, also did not provide for any fundamental changes, but rather modified, among other things, the conditions for acquiring Namibian citizenship; decreased the limit of tenure of the National Council from six to five years; instituted additional anti-corruption measures; and effected some name changes, such as “prison service“ to “correctional service”.

In August 2014, despite controversial debates within and outside the Houses of Parliament, the Third Amendment Act was passed. It came into force on 3 October 2014, ahead of the national elections. This Act contains a number of structural and, in part, far-reaching changes.

The Third Amendment Act makes way for increasing the number of voting members of the National Assembly from 72 to 96, and for giving the President and the Executive more power and control over state affairs and the appointment (instead of election) of Regional Governors. The number of seats in the National Council was also increased, to cater for the increase in 2013 from 13 to 14 regions (when Kavango Region was split into Kavango East and Kavango West), as well as for the increase of constituencies in the country from 95 to 121. Whereas initially the National Council had 26 members (2 representatives for each of the 13 regions), it now has 42 members (3 representatives for each of the 14 regions).

Other notable changes include making provision for establishing the Namibia Central Intelligence Service as a constitutional body, and for allowing the President to appoint the Head of that body. In addition, the Third Amendment Act provides for numerous administrative changes, such as the reform of the Judiciary to render it a financially and administratively independent organ of the State under the supervision of the Chief Justice instead of the Ministry of Justice; the establishment of a Boundaries Delimitation and Demarcation Commission as a permanent body; and the insertion of the Electoral Commission of Namibia (ECN) into the Constitution.

The harsh criticism of the third amendment of the Namibian Constitution pertained mainly to the lack of information and public participation in advance of the amendment. Non-governmental organisations argued that an amendment of the Constitution without the participation of the citizens is in breach of Article 17(1) of the Constitution, which states that “all citizens shall have the right to participate in peaceful political activity to influence the composition and policies of Government.” There was also harsh criticism regarding the high costs that would arise for the country’s taxpayers, in view of, among other things, the additional salaries that would have to be paid to the increased number of Members of Parliament.

Namibians are proud of their democratic Constitution, and justifiably so. However, this supreme law is not a law set in stone. Rather, it is a living document that is guiding, or should be guiding, the everyday life of all citizens as well as all political actions, policies and decisions. To enable every new generation to interpret, apply and further build the Constitution, all citizens of our country need to have access to it, and to know, understand and apply it. Only then will the Constitution indeed serve as an expression of the will of the people.

Introduction to this Annotated Edition of Namibia's Constitution

The Namibian Parliament in collaboration with the National Planning Commission and the Delegation of the European Union to the Republic of Namibia implemented a three-year Parliamentary Support Programme (from 2013 to 2015), funded by the 10th European Development Fund and implemented by the Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung and Transtec Project Management. One objective of this initiative was to enhance public access to the laws in force in Namibia, as amended. This objective was advanced by the creation of a complete, accurate and current archive of all the laws of Namibia. This project was supervised by the Parliamentary Support Programme (Johan C. De Waal, Doris Kellner and Sonja Poller). The annotated Constitution was prepared for this project by the Legal Assistance Centre (public-interest law firm based in Windhoek).

The Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung is an international political think tank with principles that, among other things, support the fostering of democracy, the rule of law, justice and equity. In Namibia, KAS has been supporting these goals as we believe that the rule of law is the basis for a stronger democracy. The Constitution is the supreme law in Namibia. It is therefore important that citizens know and understand it well. Availing and distributing the Constitution is an expensive and huge task that cannot be left for the government alone. Hence, KAS saw the need to assist in making the Constitution widely available. This edition is published with a view to enhancing the understanding of the supreme law of Namibia as a noble gesture to the people of Namibia.

The archive of annotated laws and regulations is freely available to the public on both a dedicated parliamentary website (<https://laws.parliament.na>) and the Legal Assistance Centre's website (www.lac.org.na).

All amendments of the Constitution made by the First, Second and Third Amendment Acts have been incorporated into the text in this volume, with annotations inserted directly below the applicable chapter/article/sub-article.

The annotations in this volume are the same as those in the archived versions, except that this volume excludes the annotations pertaining to the few obvious errors of spelling and numbering in the applicable Government Gazettes. Such errors have simply been corrected in this volume.

As in the archived versions, the annotations in this volume are formatted differently to the main text, so that they are clearly distinguishable at a glance.

CONSTITUTION OF THE REPUBLIC OF NAMIBIA

(including amendments from 1998 to 2014)

Government Gazette No. 2 of 1990

The Namibian Constitution was published and came into force on the date of Independence: 21 March 1990 (Article 130).

as amended by

Namibian Constitution First Amendment Act 34 of 1998

Government Gazette No. 2014 of 1998

This amending Act came into force on its date of publication: 24 December 1998.

Namibian Constitution Second Amendment Act 7 of 2010

Government Gazette No. 4480 of 2010

This amending Act came into force on its date of publication: 7 May 2010, with some exceptions (section 17 of Act 7 of 2010):

Sections 6 and 12 commenced “on the date the term of office of the existing members of the National Council ends”, referring to the members of the National Council in office when Act 7 of 2010 was enacted.

There is some uncertainty about what this date actually was.

Article 70(1) of the Namibian Constitution, as it stood prior to amendment by the Namibian Constitution Second Amendment Act 7 of 2010, stated that members of the National Council “shall hold their seats for six (6) years from the date of their election”.

This is somewhat inconsistent with 26(2) of the Regional Councils Act 22 of 1992, which states that a regional council member elected to the National Council “shall become a member of the National Council... with effect from the date following the date on which the period of office of the existing members expires”. There are also different methods for counting “years”.

Namibian Constitution Third Amendment Act 8 of 2014

Government Gazette No. 5589 of 2014

This amending Act came into force on its date of publication: 13 October 2014, with some exceptions (section 46 of Act 8 of 2014):

CONSTITUTION OF THE REPUBLIC OF NAMIBIA

Sections 1, 2(a), (b) and (d), 4(a) and (b), 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 41 and 43 commenced “after the expiry” of the term of office of the President of the Republic of Namibia in office when Act 8 of 2014 was enacted.

Sections 4(d), 10, 12 and 44 commenced “after the expiry” of the term of office of the members of the National Assembly in office when Act 8 of 2014 was enacted.

Sections 14 and 18 commenced “after the expiry” of the term of office of the members of the National Council in office when Act 8 of 2014 was enacted.

The references to provisions coming into force “after the expiry” of certain terms of office do not provide precise commencement dates for the provisions in question.

The intention may have been rather for the provisions in question to come into force “upon the expiry” or “on the date of expiry” of these terms of office. Article 29(1)(a) of the Namibian Constitution states “The President’s term of office shall be five (5) years unless he or she dies or resigns before the expiry of the said term or is removed from office.”

Article 50 of the Namibian Constitution provides that every National Assembly “shall continue for a maximum period of five (5) years”, thus allowing for some flexibility. Article 70(1) of the Namibian Constitution, after amendment in 2010, states that “Members of the National Council shall hold their seats for five (5) years from the date of their election...”.

This is somewhat inconsistent with 26(2) of the Regional Councils Act 22 of 1992, which states that a regional council member elected to the National Council “shall become a member of the National Council... with effect from the date following the date on which the period of office of the existing members expires”. There are also different methods for counting “years”.

The Table of Contents in the Government Gazette includes page numbers. Because of the amendments and annotations, the original page numbers are not accurate for this version of the Namibian Constitution and have been revised accordingly.

Capitalisation is reproduced throughout this volume as it appears in the Government Gazettes, except in the case of the few obvious errors, which have been corrected herein without annotations.

The amending Acts refer to “paragraphs” and “subparagraphs”, but the Constitution itself refers only to “Sub-Articles”, regardless of whether the sections are numbered ((1), (2), (3), etc), lettered ((a), (b), (c), etc) or double-lettered ((aa), (bb), (cc), etc).

In the Third Amendment Act, not all of the changes are indicated by amendment markings. For the reader’s convenience, all amendment markings missing in the Act have been added in this volume as per the original annotations, and the annotations have been deleted.

PREAMBLE

 - (a) such schools, colleges or institutions of tertiary education are registered with a Government department in accordance with any law authorising and regulating such registration;
 - (b) the standards maintained by such schools, colleges or institutions of tertiary education are not inferior to the standards maintained in comparable schools, colleges or institutions of tertiary education funded by the State;
 - (c) no restrictions of whatever nature are imposed with respect to the admission of pupils based on race, colour or creed;

- (2) Nothing contained in Article 10 hereof shall prevent Parliament from enacting legislation providing directly or indirectly for the advancement of persons within Namibia who have been socially, economically or educationally disadvantaged by past discriminatory laws or practices, or for the implementation of policies and programmes aimed at redressing social, economic or educational imbalances in the Namibian society arising out of past discriminatory laws or practices, or for achieving a balanced structuring of the public service, the defence force, the police force, and the correctional service.

Article 24 Derogation

- (2) Where any persons are detained by virtue of such authorisation as is referred to in Sub-Article (1) hereof, the following provisions shall apply:
- (a) they shall, as soon as reasonably practicable and in any case not more than five (5) days after the commencement of their detention, be furnished with a statement in writing in a language that they understand specifying in detail the grounds upon which they are detained and, at their request, this statement shall be read to them;

Not all of the changes are indicated by amendment markings. Amongst other unmarked changes, the words “as the President may appoint” have been deleted from the original phrase “as the President may appoint from the members of the National Assembly”. Since this deletion is not marked, it may be inadvertent – particularly since it seems to remove an essential element of the Sub-Article. BE IT ENACTED by the Parliament of the Republic of Namibia, in accordance with the requirements of Article 132 of the Namibian Constitution, as follows:-

Amendment of Article 134 of the Namibian Constitution

Short title

2. This Act shall be called the Namibian Constitution First Amendment Act, 1998.

Namibian Constitution

Second Amendment Act 7 of 2010

Government Gazette No. 4480.

This Act came into force on its date of publication: 7 May 2010, with some exceptions (section 17 of Act 7 of 2010):

Sections 6 and 12 commenced “on the date the term of office of the existing members of the National Council ends”, referring to the members of the National Council in office when Act 7 of 2010 was enacted.

There is some uncertainty about what this date actually was. Article 70(1) of the Namibian Constitution, as it stood prior to amendment by the Namibian Constitution Second Amendment Act 7 of 2010, stated that members of the National Council “shall hold their seats for six (6) years from the date of their election”. This is somewhat inconsistent with 26(2) of the Regional Councils Act 22 of 1992, which states that a regional council member elected to the National Council “shall become a member of the National Council... with effect from the date following the date on which the period of office of the existing members expires”. There are also different methods for counting “years”.

ACT

To amend the Namibian Constitution so as to extend a waiting period required for acquiring Namibian citizenship by marriage from a period of not less than two years to a period of not less than ten years of ordinarily residing in Namibia as spouse subsequent to such marriage; to extend a waiting period required for non-Namibian citizens who may apply for Namibian citizenship by naturalisation from a period of not less than five years to a period of not less than ten years of continuous residence in Namibia; to decrease the limit of tenure of members of the National Council from six years to five years; to subject the appointment of non-Namibian citizens as judges to a fixed term contract of employment; to delete the word “corruption” from the functions of the Ombudsman; to insert an Article on Anti-Corruption Measures; to decrease the term of office of members of Management Committee from three years to two years and six months; to substitute the terms “correctional service” and “Commissioner-General of Correctional Service” for the terms “prison service” and “Commissioner of Prisons”; and to provide for incidental matters.

- (c) anything made or done in terms of or under that Act continues as such and is not affected by this Act.”.

Short title and commencement

17. (1) This Act is called the Namibian Constitution Second Amendment Act, 2010, and commences on the date of its publication in the Gazette.

(2) Sections 6 and 12 commence on the date the term of office of the existing members of the National Council ends.

Namibian Constitution

Third Amendment Act 8 of 2014

Government Gazette No. 5589.

This Act came into force on its date of publication: 13 October 2014, with some exceptions (section 46 of Act 8 of 2014):

Sections 1, 2(a), (b) and (d), 4(a) and (b), 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 41 and 43 commenced “after the expiry” of the term of office of the President of the Republic of Namibia in office when Act 8 of 2014 was enacted.

Sections 4(d), 10, 12 and 44 commenced “after the expiry” of the term of office of the members of the National Assembly in office when Act 8 of 2014 was enacted.

Sections 14 and 18 commenced “after the expiry” of the term of office of the members of the National Council in office when Act 8 of 2014 was enacted.

The references to provisions coming into force “after the expiry” of certain terms of office do not provide precise commencement dates for the provisions in question.

The intention may have been rather for the provisions in question to come into force “upon the expiry” or “on the date of expiry” of these terms of office. Article 29(1)(a) of the Namibian Constitution states “The President’s term of office shall be five (5) years unless he or she dies or resigns before the expiry of the said term or is removed from office.” Article 50 of the Namibian Constitution provides that every National Assembly “shall continue for a maximum period of five (5) years”, thus allowing for some flexibility. Article 70(1) of the Namibian Constitution, after amendment in 2010, states that “Members of the National Council shall hold their seats for five (5) years from the date of their election...”. This is somewhat inconsistent with 26(2) of the Regional Councils Act 22 of 1992, which states that a regional council member elected to the National Council “shall become a member of the National Council ... with effect from the date following the date on which the period of office of the existing members expires”. There are also different methods for counting “years”.

As noted on page 20 herein, amendment markings which are missing in Government Gazette No. 5899 have been added in this volume as per the original annotations, and the annotations have been deleted.

1982 Constitutional Principles

As an international requirement, the Constituent Assembly of 1989-1990 was to adopt the so-called 1982 Constitutional Principles. These were established in 1982 by the so-called Western Five Contact Group as an addition to UN Security Council Resolution 435. The Western Five were the Western members of the UN Security Council at that time, namely the United States of America, Canada, France, Great Britain and the Federal Republic of Germany. In 1982 they had initiated new negotiations with South Africa, the frontline states, SWAPO and other political parties in Namibia, and the 1982 Constitutional Principles were the outcome of those discussions. They are contained in the documents of Security Council S/15287 of 7 December 1982, and provide for the following:

A. Constituent Assembly

1. In accordance with the United Nations Security Council resolution 435(1978), elections will be held to select a Constituent Assembly which will adopt a Constitution for an independent Namibia. The Constitution will determine the organization and powers of all levels of government.
 - Every adult Namibian will be eligible, without discrimination or fear of intimidation from any source, to vote, campaign and stand for election to the Constituent Assembly.
 - Voting will be by secret ballot, with provisions made for those who cannot read or write.
 - The date for the beginning of the electoral campaign, the date of elections, the electoral system, the preparation of voter rolls and other aspects of electoral procedure will be promptly decided upon so as to give all political parties and interested persons, without regard to their political views, a full and fair opportunity to organize and participate in the electoral process.
 - Full freedom of speech, assembly, movement and press shall be guaranteed.
 - The electoral system will seek to ensure fair representation in the Constituent Assembly to different political parties which gain substantial support in the election.
2. The Constituent Assembly will formulate the Constitution for an Independent Namibia in accordance with the principles in Part B below and will adopt the Constitution as a whole by a two-thirds majority of its total membership.

B. Principles for a Constitution for an independent Namibia

1. Namibia will be a unitary, sovereign, and democratic state.
2. The Constitution will be the supreme law of the State. It may be amended only by a designated process involving the legislature and/or votes cast in a popular referendum.
3. The Constitution will determine the organization and powers of all levels of government. It will provide for a system of governance with three branches; an elected executive branch which will be responsible to the legislative branch; a legislative branch to be elected by universal and equal suffrage which will be responsible for the passage of all laws; and an independent judicial branch which will be responsible for the interpretation of the Constitution and for ensuring its supremacy and the authority of the law. The executive and legislative branches will be constituted by periodic and genuine elections which will be held by secret vote.
4. The electoral system will be consistent with the principles in A.1 above.
5. There will be a declaration of fundamental rights, which will include the rights to life, personal liberty and freedom of movement; to freedom of conscience; to freedom of expression, including freedom of speech and a free press; to freedom of assembly and association, including political parties and trade unions; to due process and equality before the law; to protection from arbitrary deprivation of private property or deprivation of private property without just compensation; and to freedom from racial, ethnic, religious or sexual discrimination. The declaration of rights will be consistent with the provisions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Aggrieved individuals will be entitled to have the courts adjudicate and enforce these rights.
6. It will be forbidden to create criminal offences with retrospective effect or to provide for increased penalties with retrospective effect.
7. Provisions will be made for the balanced structure of the public service, the police service and defence services and for equal access by all to recruitment of these services. The fair administration of personnel policy in relation to these services will be assured by appropriate independent bodies.
8. Provisions will be made for the establishment of elected council for local and/or regional administration.

Resolution 435 of 1978 of the UN Security Council

3. Decides to establish under its authority a United Nations Transition Assistance Group in accordance with the above-mentioned report of the Secretary-General for a period of up to 12 months in order to assist his Special Representative to carry out the mandate conferred upon him by the Security Council in paragraph 1 of its resolution 431 (1978), namely, to ensure the early independence of Namibia through free elections under the supervision and control of the United Nations;

4. Welcomes the preparedness of the South West Africa People's Organization to co-operate in the implementation of the Secretary-General's report, including its expressed readiness to sign and observe the cease-fire provisions as manifested in the letter from its President of 8 September 1978;
5. Calls upon South Africa forthwith to co-operate with the Secretary-General in the implementation of the present resolution;
6. Declares that all unilateral measures taken by the illegal administration in Namibia in relation to the electoral process, including unilateral registration of voters, or transfer of power, in contravention of resolutions 385 (1976), 431 (1978) and the present resolution, are null and void;
7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Security Council not later than 23 October 1978 on the implementation of the present resolution.

Namibia's National Anthem

When Namibia became independent on 21 March 1990, the young country already had a national flag, but not yet a national anthem. At the independence celebrations the African song “Nkosi Sikelel’ iAfrica” (God Save Africa) was sung instead. (This song became the first portion of the new South African National Anthem adopted in 1997.)

Before Namibia’s independence, the national anthem of Apartheid South Africa, namely “Die Stem van Suid-Afrika” (The Call of South Africa) was played at official events in Namibia, and on occasion the so-called “Südwesterland” (“So hart wie Kameldornholz”) was sung by some German-speaking Namibians as a kind of unofficial anthem.

National competition

After independence it was time for Namibia to have a national anthem of its own, as was provided for in the Namibian Constitution. The Constituent Assembly felt that Namibia’s anthem should include the ideas and perceptions of the Namibian population, thus it delegated the task to the Namibian Broadcasting Corporation (NBC), and the NBC in turn organised a national competition for the composition of an anthem.

Numerous composers competed, and the composition of Axali Doëseb, a Namibian professional musician, was selected. Both the melody and the lyrics of his composition found wholehearted approval, despite some criticism that the emphasis on certain words did not harmonise well with the music.

The basis of Doëseb’s music was a piece that he had played on the organ at the funeral of SWAPO activist Adv. Anton Lubowski, who had been murdered in September 1989 – just six months before Namibia’s independence. People at the funeral were so taken with Doëseb’s improvisation that some of them asked him for the written notes, but such notes did not exist, and Doëseb could not even remember the exact melody. Fortunately someone had taped the funeral proceedings including the music, and Doëseb used that recording as the musical template for his written composition.

He now had the music, but no words to go with it. The competition rules stipulated that the words should be short and easy to memorise, and should reflect the history of the young country. Hence Doëseb decided to travel around Namibia for several weeks to consult Namibians of all walks of life and origins as to which topics and words they would like their new national anthem to include. The word “brave“, for example, was mentioned so often that Doëseb included this word in both the title and the first line of his composition, titled “Namibia, Land of the Brave”.

Our love for our country

The approved version of the new national anthem was introduced to the public on the first anniversary of Namibia's independence, being 21 March 1991, under the composer's direction. On 7 December 1991, an Act of Parliament (Act No. 20 of 1991) proclaimed "Namibia, Land of the Brave" as the National Anthem of the Republic of Namibia, and Doëseb transferred the copyright of the words and the music to the Republic of Namibia.

The Government's web page on national symbols states that the anthem "describes the will of the Namibian people to survive amid hardship and suffering and, most importantly, their love for their country and their nation" (www.gov.na/national-symbols). The Act makes it an offence to insult the anthem, with punishment upon conviction of up to five years' imprisonment or a fine of up to R20 000 or both, and allows the President of Namibia to make regulations relating to the Act.

Today Namibia's National Anthem is played at all official events, in schools, and daily in the morning and at the end of transmission on national radio stations and TV channels, together with the Anthem of the African Union (see page 166).

Namibia's National Flag

Unlike the situation with the National Anthem, Namibia already had its own National Flag on the day of independence. The flag was selected by the Namibia National Symbols Sub-Committee, which had been established to provide technical advice on new national symbols for the new republic. This committee was chaired by the Minister Designate of Information and Broadcasting, Hidipo Hamutenya.

In order to find a popular flag design, the Sub-Committee requested the public to submit sketches and proposals. From the total of 835 submissions, the committee selected the present design, and introduced it to the public on 2 February 1990.

On the night of 21 March 1990, when Namibia's independence was proclaimed in the presence of thousands of Namibians and numerous international guests, the South African Flag was lowered, and, amidst much rejoicing and loud applause, the new Namibian Flag was hoisted for the first time.

The Constituent Assembly stipulated in Article 2 of the Constitution of Namibia that "Namibia shall have a National Flag, the description of which is set out in Schedule 6 hereof." In that Schedule, the National Flag is described as follows:

"The National Flag of Namibia shall be rectangular in the proportion of three in the length to two in the width, tierced per bend reversed, blue, white and green; the white bend reversed, which shall be one third of the width of the flag, is charged with another of red, one quarter of the width of the flag. In the upper hoist there shall be a gold sun with twelve straight rays, the diameter of which shall be one third of the width of the flag, with its vertical axis one fifth of the distance from the hoist, positioned equidistant from the top edge and from the reversed bend. The rays, which shall each be two fifths of the radius of the sun, issue from the outer edge of a blue ring, which shall be one tenth of the radius of the sun."

Explanation of colours and symbols

The website of the Government of Namibia describes the symbols and colours of the National Flag as follows:

"Namibia's National Flag was unanimously adopted by the Constituent Assembly on 2 February 1990 as a symbol of the country's struggle for national unity.

Namibia's National Flag

It symbolises peace, unity and common loyalty to Namibia. The National Flag represents the nation in every aspect. The sun symbolises life and energy. The golden colour of the sun represents the warmth and the colour of the plains of the Namib Desert.

The blue symbolises the sky, the Atlantic Ocean, Namibia's marine resources and the importance of rain and water. Red represents the Namibian people, their heroism and their determination to build a future of equal opportunity for all. White refers to peace and unity, while the green symbolises the country's vegetation and agricultural resources.

The National Flag can be flown in foreign countries to represent Namibia.”

The Presidential Flag

Namibia's Presidential Flag was designed by the State Herald of South Africa, Fred Brownell, who later, in 1994, also designed South Africa's new flag. He was also a member of the Namibia National Symbols Sub-Committee which selected Namibia's National Flag.

The website of the Office of the President describes the Presidential Flag as follows:

“The flag of Namibia's President represents the supreme authority of the Head of State and Chief Executive.

The Flag is rectangular with three triangles in the colours of blue, gold and green. The gold is charged with the Coat of Arms.

The use of the President's Flag is restricted to Namibia. When the President travels to other countries only the National Flag is used. This means that only the National Flag can be flown in foreign countries to represent Namibia, while the President's Flag represents the status and authority of the President in Namibia.”

Flags of the Namibian Police Force and Defence Force

In addition to the Presidential Flag, Namibia has a Police Flag and a Military Flag.

Flag of the Namibian Police Force

The first design of the Flag of the Namibian Police Force was changed on 1 November 2009 in order to emphasise the link with its country: it now includes the National Flag in the top left-hand corner.

The Flag of the Namibian Police Force always takes secondary position when flown or hoisted together with the National Flag. The National Flag must be flown about 1,80 metres higher than other flags.

The National Coat of Arms and the National Seal

The National Coat of Arms and the National Seal were also enshrined in the Namibian Constitution, and subsequently all former coats of arms used by the colonial South African administration no longer applied. The Constitution, in Chapter 1, Sub-Articles 2(2) and (3), states the following:

“Namibia shall have a National Coat of Arms, a National Anthem and a National Seal to be determined by an Act of Parliament, which shall require a two-thirds majority of all the members of the National Assembly for adoption and amendment.

- (a) The National Seal of the Republic of Namibia shall show the Coat of Arms circumscribed with the word “NAMIBIA” and the motto of the country, which shall be determined by Act of Parliament as aforesaid.
- (b) The National Seal shall be in the custody of the President or such person whom the President may designate for such purpose and shall be used on such official documents as the President may determine.”

The National Coat of Arms

In 1989 the Constituent Assembly assigned the design for a National Coat of Arms and a National Seal to the Namibia National Symbols Sub-Committee, which in turn enlisted the assistance of the South African Bureau of Heraldry.

Following the Constituent Assembly’s approval of the design of the National Flag, the National Symbols Sub-Committee decided to feature the flag in the coat of arms, along with the fish eagle (Haliaeetus vocifer), the Oryx antelope and the Welwitschia mirabilis, a centuries-old desert plant still found in the Namib Desert. The Welwitschia was adopted from the coat of arms of the former colony of South West Africa.

The National Coat of Arms is the official emblem of the Government Service as a statutory body. The Coat of Arms is depicted on all official publications and stationery.

“The National Flag is reproduced on the shield of the Coat of Arms. It is firmly anchored in the sand of the centuries-old Namib Desert. On the headband above the shield is the fish eagle, representing the north and our country's water resources.

The fish eagle has excellent vision and is thus also a symbol of the far-sightedness of our country's leaders. The two Oryx antelope on either side of the shield are indigenous, specifically to the semi-arid parts of Namibia. They are renowned for their courage, elegance and pride. The Welwitschia mirabilis, rooted in the desert sand is a unique desert plant, a fighter for survival and, therefore, a symbol of Namibia's fortitude and tenacity. The headband refers to the traditions of our people and the diamond shapes symbolise the importance of diamonds to the country's economy.

The motto, Unity, Liberty, Justice enshrines the key principles embodied in the Constitution. Private bodies may not use the Coat of Arms without the express permission of the President.

The Coat of Arms may not be used by private bodies without the express permission of the President.”

The National Seal

The National Seal is used by the President to verify the authenticity of documents of state. The National motto, Unity, Liberty, Justice, appears twice on the seal – on the band beneath the Coat of Arms, and at the bottom of the rim of the seal. Also in the rim are two suns with 12 rays each.

We support people to live self-determined lives in freedom and dignity, and encourage them to lend a hand in shaping the future along these lines.

Through the publication of this annotated edition of the Namibian Constitution, KAS would like to promote Namibian citizens' knowledge and awareness of of their basic democratic rights and duties. We hope that in this way a kind of 'constitutional patriotism' can develop that will empower us to master the challenges of our society in the spirit of solidarity and justice while respecting democratic rules.

The Namibia Scientific Society was founded in 1925 as a forum for scientists and researchers in the country, with the objective of providing the Namibian population with access to knowledge and information. Through our Kuiseb Verlag we also promote the publication of scientific papers and books on topics such as the country's history, fauna and flora, biographies, transport and communications, archaeology and travel reports.

It is the wish of the Namibia Scientific Society that this edition of the Namibian Constitution will contribute to enhancing the knowledge of our basic and supreme law, as well as encourage the implementation of the Constitution in political and everyday life for the benefit of our society and each individual citizen.
